Journey of 1000 Miles starts with one step

DARREN LUM
County Life Staff

Winterdance Dogsled Tours' Hank DeBruin and Tanya McCready don't believe in failure. There are only setbacks.

Ever since they quit their jobs 20 years ago, the couple have followed their passion for the outdoors and love of dogs to the Highlands. They've overcome challenges, establishing a successful tourism operation drawing people from around the world to experience a highlight of winter in the Highlands.

This spirit comes through with their newest book, Journey of 1000 Miles.

It begins where their first book The Iditarod Dreamer leaves off, when Hank was experiencing the pain of disappointment after not being able to finish the 2010 Iditarod for himself, his team of dogs and community of supporters who helped him get to the start line.

The book delves into the mental journey Hank went through to find the strength to move forward successfully in racing, but also in work and life. Questions like "Am I enough?" McCready said. "That's ultimately what it comes down to."

It also provides a comprehensive description of the preparation necessary to race the 2011 Yukon Quest. McCready said writing this book, which took a year to complete, was a challenge since it had been so long since the Yukon Quest race. Anyone who has met DeBruin knows he is a man of few words, reserving his energy for action and, unless a person is close, he keeps emotions close to the vest. A book for the world to read, revealing his inner psyche is a big ask.

McCready said DeBruin's willingness to show his vulnerability was important. He believed, she said, that if his story could provide inspiration for others to overcome their own challenges it would be worth it.

DeBruin found not only redemption in completing the 2011 Yukon Quest, but gained knowledge and perspective about life not only from his triumph, but from the support required from his race crew, including McCready, his four children, and the community.

Though it may seem that DeBruin is extraordinary for his ability to complete multiple 1,000-mile races in blizzards and -60C temperatures, he deflects credit, saying anyone with the right mindset can do it.

"Anyone who has the dream to do that can if they are willing to put in the work and time to learn, train and gain the skills needed, and has a 150 per cent commitment to accomplishing it," he said via email. "But it is also a metaphor for chasing a dream that anyone has." McCready added: "Hank says he doesn't feel special because this is just our life and what we do every day. We work with dogs seven days a week and travelling with them is the ultimate joy. He says there is nothing special about him, it is the dogs and what they are and what they do that is the magic."

Free webinars with the couple were being offered in the lead up to the electronic version of the book's release called Stories and Lessons from the Yukon Quest Trail to Help You Come Out Stronger on the Other Side of the Pandemic.

Although the dogsled tour company experienced an early finish to their season in March, they are enjoying record-setting bookings up to this point in the year for the coming operating season, which has been primarily visitors from within Ontario due to travel restriction. McCready said they are optimistic about the bookings, but in case there is another shutdown with rising COVID-19 numbers, they are also focusing on building their online presence. They are aiming to draw more corporate clients with webinars, teaching the lessons they learned competing in epic dogsled races. There is a correlation between aspects of leadership and teamwork of a dogsled team, made up of different personalities, and what it takes to lead a team of people in business.

"Tanya always reminds me that my mindset affects the dogs more than I often realize," DeBruin says in the book's fourth chapter. "She says she can be 1,000 miles away and look at my spot tracker (if I have one) during a race, and watching the speed the team is moving at, taking into account conditions and terrain, and know exactly what my mindset it. The dogs, like any team, be it your family, co-workers, employees a sports team, feed off the energy of their leader."

This book is more than a descriptive tale of overcoming adversity. It is about where your passion can take you if you take that first step, whether you took two steps back to get there.

In chapter four, The Magic Carpet Ride, DeBruin says, "One of my favourite scenes in my life is standing on our front porch on a winter's night, looking in the front door and seeing the welcoming warmth of a roaring fire in the fireplace, kids, Spot and the cats ripping around and Tanya in the middle of it all. Growing up with 10 siblings, life was always a beehive of activity and while four children is a lot less than 11, between the business, the kids and all our animals, life is certainly never dull or quiet and neither Tanya or I would have it any other way. We love the crazy, busy, beautiful messiness of it all."

Journey of 1000 Miles will be available as an e-book with colour photos on Amazon soon and then be available in print with black and white photos in February. Buy the book locally at Master's Book Store in Haliburton, or through the mail from Amazon. See the Winterdance website www.winterdance.com for more information.

Zimbabwean talents come to Scultpure Forest

Above, the Together we achieve the extraordinary sculpture by Zimbabwean sculptor Tizirai Gumbere was installed on Nov. 13 in front of the Haliburton School of Art + Design. It was donated by former art gallery owners, Sue Black and Chris Ralphs. Black thought of the donation while snowshoeing at the Sculpture Forest last winter. This is one of three new sculptures added this month, two of which were donated by Black and Ralphs. Left, Sculpture Forest curator Jim Blake stands next to the springstone (also known as opal stone) sculpture Matriarchy by Zimbabwean sculptor Tarzan Sithole, which was installed on Nov. 13 and is located on the Head Lake Trail. It was donated by former art gallery owners Sue Black and Chris Ralphs./DARREN LUM Staff

Dandelion sculpture rooted in inspiration and hope

DARREN LUM
County Life Staff

Everybody needs hope. Sometimes you just need to make a wish and believe.

This is the prevailing sentiment behind the latest sculpture installed at Haliburton's Sculpture Forest called Some see a weed; I see a wish.

The predominantly powder-coated green steel sculpture measures 14 feet in height and looks like a giant dandelion, bowed over ready for the wind to carry its white seeds throughout the woods and beyond. Close to the base, four green leaves are laser cut with the name of the sculpture across two of them. It easily stands apart from the stark autumn sky and its surrounding setting of bare trees at the Sculpture Forest.

It is from the hands and hearts of about three dozen integrated arts and industrial arts class students from Innisdale Secondary School of Barrie.

Integrated arts teacher Jennica Hwang said it was a special moment to see the sculpture anchored down to where it will be indefinitely. Some see a weed was two years in the making (one to make and one to wait for COVID-19 restrictions to ease). It represents an achievement for everyone involved, she said.

"I think for us it goes a lot deeper than just being able to make a sculpture for a sculpture forest. People have had some difficult things that have happened from the beginning of [the pandemic] for us," she said.

Hwang, who made the trip with teachers Tracey Aylesworth, Chris Taylor and Craig Banks, talked about how this isn't the first artistic work put on public display by integrated arts students.

Five years ago, another set of students from the same program created the art exhibit From the Ground Up, a multimedia presentation with poetry, music, dance, paintings and a dandelion sculpture for the Royal Victoria Regional Health Centre in Barrie. To have another opportunity to create something for the public was important.

"Being able to make something that kind of mirrors and links to the initial one is meaningful for us personally and for the students to have the opportunity to be part of something like this is really cool. I mean there are really well-known sculptors whose work is in the forest."

At the heart of the new sculpture is Collingwood teacher and cancer survivor Deb Shackell.

She saw the Innisdale Secondary School creation a short time after being diagnosed with non-Hodgkin lymphoma in September 2018 during a break from her treatments at the Royal Victoria Hospital and said she found hope and inspiration. It would plant the seed for the effort to bring Some see a weed; I see a wish to Haliburton.

Raising money for the Sculpture Forest's newest addition, through a GoFundMe campaign and from the sale of inspiration photography art cards Shackell produced, was about sharing the inspiration she felt with others.

"It was a beautiful sign that everything was going to be OK because dandelions have always been a special symbol of hope, positivity and seeing the best in things," she said, behind a mask adorned with dandelion seeds and wearing mitts with dandelions on her hands.

The effort to move the sculpture from the back of the truck to its new location could be likened to how the members of a rural community come together to stand up a barn wall. She was in awe of the result of the hard work and heart represented in the sculpture.

There is added importance, she said, to have this sculpture for people to see during the pandemic.

"It's especially important and relevant right now. Everybody needs hope in something and something positive to look at," he said.

Deb Shackell crouches in front of the installed sculpture, Some see a weed; I see a wish. Shackell said when she saw the students' sculpture, which was made five years ago, at the Royal Victoria Hospital in Barrie after being diagnosed with cancer. It gave her hope and inspired her. She is now cancer free. She helped raise money for the sculpture to be installed in Haliburton through a GoFundMe campaign and from the sale of inspirational photography art cards. /DARREN LUM Staff

Twas six weeks before Christmas, don'tcha know

Maybelle's Fireside stories

NOW, I DON'T know about you, dear reader, but 'ol Maybelle is looking this COVID bug right between the eyes and telling it: I'm going to be safe and careful of bumping into you, but I'm determined to have a very merry Christmas, don'tcha know. Oh, it may be a whole six weeks away, but as for preparing for it, it feels more like it's happening tomorrow!

Yep. The Christmas wreath came out of the shed and is now up on my front door here in Lake WhaddayathinkImean. Twindle Mumbly, who loves anything that twinkles, strung up blue and white lights all around his Taxidermy and Haberdashery shop window two days ago and has them glowing 24/7.

Vilma Yuccch, who has been tie-dying her signature line of detachable sleeves for shirts for months, all red and green, is now selling them at her online store, "Yuccch!" don'tcha know.

Sybil Beaucannon Hughes is churning out facial masks with a candy cane print on some and another type that has a big red nose like Rudolph.

Officer Stanley Penelope McBottom is getting his new invention ready for the big day – a hologram of Matthew McConaughy reciting "The Twelve Days of Christmas" while driving a Lincoln wearing Bermuda shorts and flip flops. Should be fun watching it while we're all sitting six feet apart sipping hot cocoa in my living room, don'tcha know.

Beanpole Starkman is busy painting the wings of his 250 Tiger Moth bi-plane red, white, and green stripes. Why, I don't know. He's not going anywhere in it. But, it gives him good cheer to be playing with his big-boy toy and that's the important thing.

Bogart, my pet bear keeps listening to an old recording of Bing Crosby singing, "White Christmas" and trying to imitate him. He so wants to join in with our little Christmas sing-along, don'tcha know. But it's kinda sad, because in his head, he sounds like a human singing, but what we actually hear sounds like: Grrrrrrrrraaaaaaaawwww!

As for ol' Maybelle … I've been busy as a beaver clogging a dam, buying gifts I can find at our local shops in Lake WhaddayathinkImean, and the rest online…not just for my close bubble of friends who live nearby, but for my buds who live in other countries, too, don'tcha know. So, that takes planning ahead, and I'm all for that because I want everyone I care about to know I'm thinking of them.

I'm also baking up a storm. Why my freezer is just about bursting at the seams…but, it gives me great pleasure knowing that I'll have something yummy to give to my friends and neighbours closer to the big day. Oh, yes, you see my dearly beloved Auntie Hester was a wonderful baker (or would she be called, bake-tress?) and bequeathed ol' Maybelle her recipes for banana bread, apple pie crumble, and chocolate squares loaded with walnuts and raisins. The only problem is …I can't resist eating some of it as I go along. Why, my clothes may still fit me, but I could swear my cheeks look pregnant.

And thank goodness for Zoom and Skype and Whatsapp and Messenger. While I won't be hoppin' on a plane this year to see family and old pals south of the border, I WILL be able to see them, and talk to them online, and it does my heart good knowing that. Truth be told, we do that on a regular basis, anyway… which has been a great comfort during this time of quarantine and social distancing. Why my old friend, Sneemoth Lurg, who lives in Huntington Beach, California is making great fun art for the first time. He showed me his drawing of a smiling man with a long purple moustache and a choo-choo train on his head. It sure made ol' Maybelle smile which I plan to do all the way to Christmas.

Maybelle's Fireside Stories is written by Jerelyn Craden. Jerelyn's books, "Vessie Flamingo Outshining the Moon," and "Maybelle's Cure for What Ails You" are available at amazon.com

Top 10 things you can only tell your best friend

HAVING A BEST FRIEND is great. You can borrow things or ask them to help you move. You can call them names you'd never call anyone else. But the best thing is you can tell them anything and they won't judge you – but only because they already have.

STEVE GALEA
Humour Columnist

Here are the top 10 things you can only tell your best friend.

1. The reason you took so long in the washroom.
2. Anything hemorrhoid-related.
3. "See these socks. I found them!"
4. "The cashier said I could tap, so I did a little soft-shoe number."
5. "These aren't my real eyebrows."
6. "Don't tell anyone, but my hearing is actually perfect."
7. "Big deal, my tail is prehensile."
8. "Frankly, I prefer Mrs. Howell."
9. "Remember the elevator? Well, that was me."
10. "Before we say goodnight, let me just say you've had a peppercorn between your front teeth since lunch."

It's about us and we

In the last several weeks my email, the newspapers and my friends have been focused on ways to deal with COVID-19. It seems we have come to the place in time here it is obvious that the pandemic has altered our existence profoundly. We realize now that to ignore or deny the depth of the myriad effects of COVID-19 creates an untenable situation for all of us. Each choice we make is influenced by a series of possible repercussions we cannot control. The popular concept that we have the ability to accomplish anything if we just work hard enough has run up against the brick wall of truth. All things are not possible. A little knobby virus cell is more powerful than all of us. Yes, there are responses that can protect us. In the end all we can do is go with the programs for prevention. There are two choices. Do what you're told to lower the levels of risk you take or suffer the consequences. No amount of debate will change this. Self determination has limits. As individuals we are not going to change the world without living within the limits of possibility. The way we live and the choices we make matter. When we don't step back a bit and look at the long-term results of our decisions we can do massive amounts of harm to the world in which we live. It is not all about you and me. It is about us and we.

By Heather May

Nightwalking

Spot a young moose on today's round-trip hike
Turkeys, south-aiming geese too
Owls begin speaking: Great Horned, stuttered hoots
Startle us; doe squeaks adieu

Dusk (when the senses take turns on a dream)
Silvers the creek near the weir
Fingernail morsel of buttery moon
Mirrors itself tidy clear

Fields cling to emerald, others glow gold
Sun disappearing still shows
Shadows blue-stretching on grass over hills
Vaporize as the night grows

Breezes this evening, suspiciously mild
Calendar implicates chill
Incoming winter feels aeons away
Sky tonight promises thrill

Shaped constellations and Milky Way smear
Crooked thick rainbow in white
Too many cluster star twinkles to count
Two of us shrink at the sight

Into mute minions, no power to reach
Nature's most alien cold
Fearless and fearful, the two of us stare
Lost in that space million-fold

Lunar curl galaxy yawning above
Drugs us shock-speechless down here
Dead leaves start crawling like creatures aroused
Hecate! whispers Shakespeare

All of a sudden we're cold and we're tired
Humbled by place and by time
Chuckling with goosebumps and need for a cave
Houseward back up road we climb

By Deborah J Reed

Deadline looms for new bursary for Wilberforce students

DARREN LUM
County Life Staff

Students from the Wilberforce area are being encouraged to apply for a new Wilberforce FUNraising Group Bursary Award worth $500.

The new bursary is made possible by an anonymous donor, said bursary coordinator and member of the Wilberforce FUNraising Group, Kathy Rogers.

"We searched out new ideas. We contacted the [Gooderham Community Action Group] as they had a bursary program for their community in place and asked if we could copy their idea for our community and they granted us permission and helped us get it set up," she wrote in an email. "We now are establishing a $500 bursary award for one student from the Wilberforce area to further their education. We anticipated doing this earlier in the year but the pandemic has delayed many things as well as this one."

The team of five at the fundraising group works to bolster community spirit.

Although the donation was only enough for this year's bursary offering, they hope to continue to offer the bursary in following years. The funding for future recipients will come from fundraising efforts such as their maple syrup festival, penny raffle and the sale of community calendars. The group also welcomes donations from the public.

Rogers said getting to offer this bursary to students can only help provide a brighter future.

"As we are a small village we want to encourage our youth to broaden their knowledge and help them cover the high costs of further education," she said.

The bursary application asks for the intended program of study, the name of the college, university or apprenticeship program, career goals, and academic information such as credits completed and final marks, participation in extra-curricular activities, and community service activities. It also asks for a written submission or video presentation or graphic presentation about the reason why the applicant is applying for the bursary and what career goals they have to be attached to the application. Preference will be given to students entering their first year of post-secondary education. The Wilberforce FUNraising Group will review the applications.

"We are not only looking for academic marks but for creative, community minded people," the group's information sheet reads.

The deadline for application is Dec. 1. Call Joan Barton at 705-448-3074 or email joan4196@gmail.com.

DVD of the Month - November

Dolittle* starring Robert Downey Jr.

After losing his wife to a tragedy at sea seven years ago, the eccentric Dr. John Dolittle, famed doctor and veterinarian of Queen Victoria's England, hides behind the high walls of his lavish Manor with only his menagerie of exotic animals for company. But when the young queen falls gravely ill, a reluctant Dolittle is forced to set sail on an epic adventure to a mythical island in search of a cure. Joined on his quest by a young, self-appointed apprentice and a raucous coterie of animal friends, Dolittle sets out on a course that may just change his outlook on life.

With a star-studded cast including Tom Holland, Selena Gomez, Emma Thompson, and Antonio Banderas, as well as iconic actor Robert Downey Jr. as the eccentric doctor himself, Dolittle is the perfect choice for a fun-filled family film night. Check it out from Haliburton County Public Library today.

Fines and Timgren get toes tapping

Musician Jodi Timgren was the opening act for blues and folk singer-songwriter Rick Fines during an afternoon concert on Saturday, Nov. 14 at the Legion in Haliburton. Organized by the Haliburton County Folk Society, Timgren and Fines also performed later that day at the Legion. Like all public events, COVID-19 protocols were employed such as limiting capacity to 50 attendees, mask wearing for people in attendance and a barrier between the performers and the audience. The Legion will have another concert from 7 to 11 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 21 when it hosts Emily Burgess & the Emburys. See www.haliburtonlegion.com/event-calendar for other events and offerings at the Haliburton Legion. /DARREN LUM Staff

SIRCH For a Better World: Give from your heart this Christmas

They say it's always better to give than receive. As a child it's hard to wrap our head around this concept. Even as adults we often say this mantra, but do we actually believe it?

This year the world experienced a global pandemic that changed the way we live. We had to pivot every week to adapt to new changes and adjust to the new normal. That was no different for SIRCH Community Services.

Since March, SIRCH has provided more than 12,500 free meals throughout Haliburton County. For many these meals were met with gratitude and a deep appreciation. They showed that our community is a community that cares.

"I am a single mom, was laid off due to COVID and am recovering from surgery. I can't stand long enough to prepare decent meals for my six- and four-year-old girls. SIRCH's prepared meals have been a godsend."

However the need hasn't stopped. The pandemic is far from over and many are worried about what the winter might bring. More uncertainty, increased challenges, loneliness, isolation and worry.

This fall SIRCH was excited to bring back our Lunch Is On Us initiative, a free weekly lunch offered to anyone and everyone at our Bistro & Marketplace. The program offers a nutritious, hot lunch every Wednesday during the fall and winter months. However Lunch Is On Us isn't just about offering food, but about offering people an opportunity for connection, companionship and comfort during the harsh winter months.

Funds raised from our annual Gifts From The Heart campaign will go towards supporting Lunch is On Us and our frozen Community Kitchen meals, which are distributed throughout the county to individuals and families that are struggling due to illness, depression, lack of resources and more. This year the need is higher than ever and we are hoping you will be able to find a way to help us.

We know you care about your community, in the good times and in the bad. You have shown that you believe in the work SIRCH is doing. Be part of the solution. Donate to this year's Gifts from the Heart campaign and bring a true spirit of giving into your heart. The possibilities are endless and at SIRCH we're just getting started.

For more information about Gifts From The Heart, including how to donate, visit www.sirch.on.ca/gifts.

The printed community newspaper is by far the favourite source of local news and information in communities large and small across Canada. Time spent with a community newspaper is virtually unchanged compared to two years ago and not surprisingly, the predominant reason for reading printed community newspapers is local information, including news, editorial, sports, entertainment and events.

Passing motorists were in for a surprise last week when this 94-foot steamship made its way up Highway 35 en route to its new berth in Muskoka. The Wanda III was built in 1915 for private use by the Eaton family. The new owners have ambitious plans to put this tub back in service alongside the RMS Segwin

Minden Winter Carnival lives another year

by Andy Holloway

It looks like the Minden Winter Carnival will live for at least one more year after residents banded together to save the annual fair.

About 15 people, including Minden councillors, attended a meeting last Wednesday night in an effort to save the carnival which was dropped by the Kinsmen who ran the event for the past 20 years. Representatives from the Legion, Lions Club, Kinsmen and Minden Skating Club were at the meeting as were several residents with no club affiliation.

All present at the meeting agreed the carnival should be geared to children. To this end, the carnival will undergo some important changes to make it more attractive to children and their families and also to cut down on costs.

"The problem is not finances, the problem is what are we going to do"

The carnival was intially organized as a means of raising funds for the Kinsmen Club while providing a weekend of winter activities. Last year's carnival, however, operated at $1,000 in the red. The club says it cost about $10,000 to put on last year's events while income was just $9,000. Despite this poor financial picture, the club still has $4,700 left in its carnival budget that will be passed on to the new organizers.

"We do have a nest egg to kick us off with so it's not as if we're stuck with nothing," said Minden Reeve and new committee chair Bern Berry. "The problem is not finances, the problem is what are we going to do, what ideas do we have and where are we going to get the manpower?"

Kinsmen president Jim Carrell said the committee should be "prepared to be amazed" when expenses do start rolling in. Winn Newbury, who was one of the first organizers of the event, said in the beginning the carnival didn't even have a budget, yet things still got done and everyone had a good time. Those who remembered the carnival's heyday in the 1970s said it was because the children were involved and so were the schools.

Gone are such events as the MuchMusic video dance party which lost money last year. In its place the new organizers want a return to the types of events the carnival had in its beginning years. A Carnival Queen and King contest, torch light parade, bonfire and a figure skating exhibition are being looked at for Friday night to kick off the weekend.

On Saturday events like a baseball tournament, cross-country ski races, arm wrestling, helicopter rides, sleigh rides, card games for seniors and a dinner are being planned. And yes, there will be a dance, although Berry said the format will have to be decided later by the committee which is comprised of Lisa Connelly, Dwight Thomas, Brian Moore and Jeanne Anthon. Moore was representing the chamber of commerce and the Lions Club. He said the chamber does not have the resources to help financially, but it will help spread the word.

Sunday's featured plans include ice skating, skating races, and a pancake breakfast. During the weekend the Kinsmen will have their regular ice car races and the curling club is hosting a bonspiel.

O`Reilly turns Haliburton red

Thirt yeight years of patience finally paid off as heavy turnouts at the polls brought the Liberals back to the forefront in Victoria-Haliburton.

Almost 71 percent of the eligible voters in Haliburton County cast their ballots last Monday, and the result was a surprisingly strong win for John O'Reilly.

The Liberal candidate picked up 20,511 votes, beating out Reformer Barry Devolin by almost 5,000 votes.

Although O'Reilly will not be sworn in as this riding's Member of Parliament until later this week, he is already receiving dozens of calls from constituents in need of help from their representative.

Former MP Bill Scott's constituency office was closed down early last week.

Victoria-Haliburton has been a Conservative stronghold for the past 38 years. Scott, who filled the post for the past 27 years, announced his retirement prior to the election call. The Tories chose Lindsay lawyer Lorne Chester as their candidate this time around, but the best he could manage it this nationwide Liberal sweep was a third-place finish with 12,387 votes.
